Lee Crombleholme has over 14 years experience helping golfers from club level up to European Tour professionals attain confidence and consistency in their golf games. Kevin is a former professional golfer and is now a Titleist Performance Institute Level 3 Golf Fitness Professional, their highest accolade.

Kevin uses the latest 3D technology, functional movement tests and golf specific strength and power tests to thoroughly screen each golfer. By screening his clients at the outset, he is able to design a perfectly tailored, individual exercise program to enable his clients to achieve their goals quickly and efficiently.

As a former professional, Kevin has an in-depth knowledge of swing mechanics and of the complexity and demands of both professional and amateur golf.

Kevin understands the nuances of the many varied swing styles taught by the world's best teachers and the particular requirements each of these styles places upon the body. With this technical knowledge, he is able to design and coach strength and conditioning programmes that focus on how to best help his clients perform their own swing technique and to protect them from injury caused by the stresses of their particular swing style.

Kevin is an expert in: Golf specific screening; 3D golf biomechanics; corrective exercise; flexibility; posture; injury rehab; nutrition; fat loss and strength and power development.

Andrew Murray is an English professional golfer. Andrew turned professional in 1972. He played on the European Tour from the 1979 through 1995 before calling time on his career, after suffering from spondylitis for many years.

He recorded only one win on the European Tour, at the 1989 Panasonic European Open. That season, he finished a career best 28th on the Order of Merit.

Andrew has since worked as a commentator and analyst for the BBC. After turning 50, he has combined that work with a return to tournament golf on the European Seniors Tour.

Challenge Tour Player – Tom Murray

Tom's biggest goal of all is to play on The European Tour and win, several times. Before that however, my short term goal is to gain some invaluable experience on the Challenge Tour in 2013/14.

Having secured a full card at the Qualifying School, I intend to play around 20 events and graduate to the European Tour at the end of the season, by finishing in the top 20 on the money list.

I completed my 3 year PGA Degree in 2012, something that I was keen on achieving before I fully embarked on my playing career. I did this under the guidance of Head Professional Peter Barber at Didsbury GC, Manchester.
